

Dr Marios Sophocleous (male) is now a Technical Project Manager and the Head of Hardware at eBOS Technologies Ltd. Marios was a Special Scientist at the University of Cyprus from 2016 until 2022. He obtained his M. Eng. degree in Mechatronics & Ph.D. degree in Thick-Film Underground Sensors from the University of Southampton in 2011 & 2016, respectively. He is a Fulbright Schuman Fellowship 2021 winner. He has been nominated for the Outstanding Young Engineer Award of the IEEE Instrumentation and Measurement Society in 2019 whilst he was a Young Scientist 2020 finalist in Cyprus. Marios is a member of the Editorial Advisory Board of Sensors and Actuators A: Physical Journal, Microelectronics International Journal, the Lead Guest Editor of an IEEE Sensors Journal Special Issue & an Associated Editor, Founding and Steering Committee member of IEEE Transactions on AgriFood Electronics Journal and the corresponding Conference on Agrifood Electronics (CAFÉ). He has published more than 45 journal and conference papers in high-impact journals and conferences and served as Track Chair for IEEE Sensors Conference and other highly prestigious conferences. Marios is also a Visiting Researcher at Tel Aviv University in the field of biosensors and their electronic instrumentation.